Walter Salas-Humara Art+Music

Studio Comfort Texas (SCTX) opens an exhibition celebrating the newest series of colorful horse paintings by artist and musician, Walter Salas-Humara.

COMFORT, TX – Beginning March 11th at Studio Comfort Texas, Walter Salas-Humara presents an exhibit of colorful and dreamlike horses.

Though consistent in subject and form, Salas-Humara’s art is far from monotonous. One recognizes in the sea of color the artist’s unconventional life: Born in New York to Cuban refugees, Salas-Humara went on to help jumpstart the alt-Country movement with his band The Silos before returning to visual art. The Americana that influenced his music is visible in his choice of subject. The Dali-like silhouettes of his horses cluster in lyrical canvas herds, or stand alone in more monumental pieces. Simple at first glance, his work merits contemplation. Salas-Humara says, “I do not literally paint the horse, but the emotion it produces upon me...The shapes and hues assert themselves and interact with one another, as if in conversation.”

For a full experience of Salas-Humara’s talents, join us at Studio Comfort Texas on Saturday, March 14 for a special evening of art and music with an Artist Reception 4-7pm. Afterward, Salas-Humara will treat guests to a House Concert in the gallery amid artwork and unbelievable acoustics. He’ll be joined by guitarist/producer Joe Reyes of San Antonio, and his brother Ignacio Salas-Humara.

Walter Salas-Humara solo exhibition runs from March 11 through March 29 at Studio Comfort Texas. You are invited to a Reception on Saturday, March 14 from 4-7pm, and a House Concert by Salas-Humara following from 7-9pm.
